XINJIANG IN 2022: AFTER FIVE YEARS OF CRACKDOWN

Australian
National University

After five years of intense crackdown, the Xinjiang region in Western China has been entirely transformed. The region that previously hosted a unique and expressed culture has now been silenced and erased. An assault on the Uyghur people, and other Turkic nationalities in the region, has seen upwards of a million people detained or imprisoned, sacred sites destroyed and family planning stopping the population in its tracks. This briefing will look at the changes that this crackdown has brought on the region, how the crackdown itself has changed and what might come next.
